WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

An approaching cold front will slide across from the northwest to the southeast tonight. This will bring rain to northwest California and strong gusty mountain winds to the coastal ranges of Del Norte and northern Humboldt counties. A steady stream of moisture will follow into the weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

The weak tail end of an approaching Pacific weather system will likely bring some light rainfall to the northernmost portions of the Bay today, otherwise mild conditions are expected. Friday looks to be mostly sunny and mild, but then a somewhat wetter system will move in on Saturday and spread the chances of rain. After a few residual showers on Sunday, dry conditions and seasonal temperatures are projected into the first part of next week.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

A slow moving weather system will bring inconsistent wet/dry/wet weather to end the work week into the weekend. Thursday will see the first wave impact mainly the coastal range and northern Sacramento valley. Dry and a rebound in temperatures will occur Friday. Saturday through Sunday will see widespread precipitation with breezy winds and isolated thunderstorms Saturday. Saturday night will bring some high elevation snow to northern Sierra, and lingering showers Sunday. Next week will continue below average with periods of precipitation in the north.

Hanford Weather:

Weak high pressure aloft is will produce mostly clear skies and a slight warming trend today. Another system will bring increased clouds along with a cooling trend and increased winds over the higher elevations by the weekend. High pressure will build inland by the middle of next week bringing a return to warmer temperatures.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure aloft and weak offshore flow will keep temperatures above normal through Friday. On Saturday, low pressure will move across the West Coast bringing cooler temperatures with a slight chance of showers to the Central Coast. The cool conditions will continue on Sunday and Monday. However by Tuesday and Wednesday high pressure will develop yet again bringing warmer temperatures and the possibility of some offshore breezes.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure will bring warm weather and a very shallow marine layer today and Friday. Any night and morning fog will be patchy and limited to the coast, but possibly dense. Over the weekend a trough of low pressure moving inland over Northern California will bring cooler weather and a much deeper marine layer. Patchy drizzle is possible west of the mountains Sunday morning. The trough will be followed by warmer weather and less extensive low clouds Monday and Tuesday.

Southeast California Weather:

A gradual warming trend is expected to continue through the remainder of this week as strong high pressure strengthens. A cooling trend is expected to take place from Sunday onward into early next week as low pressure moves inland into the Great Basin with temperatures falling back to near seasonal normals.
